

I have the honor and pleasure to host Jillian R Kreingbring M.S, Functional Anatomy Course 1 on July 29-31, 2022. Understanding the elements of a healthy posture in movement for your horse is essential to keeping him sound in both body and mind over many years. Jillian has a passion to share her knowledge of equine anatomy with anyone with a love for horses in a way that is easy to understand and leaves you with wanting more! Jillian's Functional Anatomy Course is indoors. We will have a few brief labs on a live horse out in my covered arena under the fans. Jillian will be available for private lessons with your horse on Monday August 1, 2022. This would be a great time to have Jillian evaluate your horse's anatomy and conformation.

I took my first Functional Anatomy Course with Jillian many years ago. Truthfully, I only went to my first clinic because it was in January, and it was too cold to ride! It turned out to be one of the most educational clinics that I have ever attended. Life changing really. I have never and will never look at a horse in the same way again. I have attended the same clinic by Jillian at least 6 other times. Each time I hear the information, I come away with a deeper understanding of just how important the horse's posture is both in movement and even simply standing still. You will come away being able to look in detail at your horse or any horse and know what their strengths are. You will also be able to tell where that horse could use some additional help in movement and posture to keep him happy and sound as long as possible.

This is one of the best and most educational clinics that you will ever attend. This information is has a direct impact on your horse's suppleness and balance. If you have never taken this course before or met Jillian, come join us and explore how you can influence and even change your horse's conformation with proper posture during movement. If you have taken this course before, come welcome Jillian back to North Texas and find out the new information that she has to share with us!
